

INTERNATIONAL JAZZ DAY – EDUCATOR GUIDE

In November 2011, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) officially designated April 30 as International Jazz Day in order to highlight jazz music's unique ability to unite people in all corners of the globe.

International Jazz Day brings together communities, schools, artists, historians, academics, and jazz enthusiasts all over the world to celebrate and learn about jazz music's roots and history, as well as its wide-reaching impact and enduring influence.

During the ongoing challenges of the global pandemic, we recognize that different public health situations and policies may exist from location to location. We encourage all educators to be safe, follow all local public health directives and use International Jazz Day as an opportunity to enrich their existing instruction on or around April 30, whether virtual or in-person.

Here are some ideas and resources for exploring jazz with your students on April 30:

- Play audio or video clips of jazz recordings and performances and discuss with your students what they like or don't like about the music.
- Invite a jazz musician to conduct a virtual listening session and/or give a talk to your class via Zoom.
- Use one of the lesson plan packs available for download from <https://jazzday.com/educational-resources/>.
- Ask your students to draw or write about how jazz makes them feel or think.
- Have students research the local roots of jazz in your town or city. What made jazz unique in your local environment?
- Ask your students to interview older relatives about their experiences with jazz, and encourage them to listen to these relatives' favorite jazz songs. They can then share the results of their interviews with the class.
- Have students write a skit or play based on the life of a great jazz musician.
- Encourage students to explore some of the jazz websites in the resource list below.
