

What to do in Brussels this weekend: 28 April – 1 May

Friday, 28 April 2023

By Lauren Walker

Even though Belgium still has to wait a little longer before the mercury surpasses 20°C, the weather is finally improving, meaning there are fewer excuses to stay in all weekend long. And why would you, with an extra day off and a jam-packed agenda full of exciting events in Brussels? Find our favourites below!

[...Excerpted...]

International jazz day, Sunday 30 April

Twelve years ago, 30 April was officially designated as International Jazz Day to highlight the music genre and its diplomatic role in uniting people around the world. Every year on this day, celebrations paying tribute to jazz are organised across the world, including in Brussels.

The capital's most iconic jazz bars, including the Jazz Station, will organise several events to promote Belgian jazz and defend music synonymous with freedom, sharing and adventure.

Find more information and the full programme for all Belgian events here.

Jazz musician during a concert. Credit: Belga/ Laurie Dieffembacq